

Solver Recognized as Microsoft National System Integrator

Los Angeles, CA- Solver, a Performance Management and Business Intelligence solutions provider announced today that it has been named a Microsoft National System Integrator (NSI) Partner. Microsoft's NSI Program consists of a select group of strategic organizations that provide significant value driving the Microsoft platform and application business nationwide.

"We are thrilled to be part of Microsoft's NSI program, as it reflects Solver's growing national footprint to deliver performance management and business intelligence solutions to Global 2000 and mid-market organizations" says Scott Stein, Chief Operating Officer of Solver. "We continue to see validation of our investments and focus on innovative high-impact performance management solutions that completely align with Microsoft's current momentum establishing the leadership position in business intelligence.

The NSI program will help expand joint focus and engagement between Microsoft and Solver, including overall strategic planning, alignment of geographical and field resources, collaborative marketing efforts as well as deeper product team engagement and executive sponsorship.

"The NSI designation requires partner business commitment to providing outstanding customer satisfaction and building deep competencies in Microsoft technology. Solver's proven ability to deliver business-driven Microsoft solutions across multiple geographic and industry segments makes them an ideal NSI partner" says Greg Urquhart, General Manager of National SI & ISV Partners at Microsoft.

"Being recognized as one of the premier Microsoft partners proves how committed Solver is to delivering business value to customers. Solver is one of a few partners in the NSI program exclusively focused on delivering Microsoft Business Intelligence solutions. We will use our deep expertise to help Microsoft and other partners efficiently deploy BI across a customer's organization" says Nils Rasmussen, President of Solver.
